Civics Summit

In September, the Institute for Principle Studies hosted the 2024 Civics Summit focused on the state of healthcare in America. The conference was well attended and very educational. There was an excellent lineup of speakers covering a wide span of topics relating to the state of healthcare in America. Daniel Mitchell gave a thorough presentation on the economic factors that influence the healthcare system in America, Greg Remke covered the impact that food choices have had on the health of Americans, and Max Nelson explored the relationship between healthcare workers and labor unions. In addition, Phil Olson shared his experience with healthcare sharing programs while Jonathan Wolfson was able to address many questions that attendees had about America's complex healthcare system. Finally, as a direct care physician, Brian Lenzkes provided an inside perspective of the medial scene, and Mary Winther presented specific plan ideas that debaters can focus on for debate. Mary also covered the biblical principles as they pertain to healthcare in America. If you were unable to attend the event, keep an eye out for video recordings of the event that will be made available shortly.

Student Academy

The Student Academy training course is now available to students once they register and have an account on the LFA website. This course teaches debaters the basic principles behind debate and dives into the debate theory that students will need to debate effectively. If you are having an issue logging into your LFA account, please email the LFA office your school's IP address so that it can be approved through our website security system.

Event Calendar

Make sure to stay up-to-date on when tournaments are being hosted. For easy access, refer to the LFA event calendar to see the registration deadlines for all virtual tournaments, and to know when/where in-person events are being hosted.

Coaches, if your school is planning on hosting a tournament, please notify the LFA home office at Info@LogosForensics.org with the location and dates, so the tournament can be listed on the LFA event calendar.
